“Dear old world,” she murmured, “you are very lovely and I am glad to be alive in you.” L.M. Montgomery, Anne of Green Gables

I love Anne of Green Gables. It’s one of those books I never desired to open until a few years ago when I “had” to read it with a class. It captured my imagination in a way that deepened my love of God’s creation. More adjectives than I realized I knew started coming to mind when I would look at a tree, hear a bird, or pay attention to changing seasons (Thanks Anne!). But, let it be said that the loveliest and dearest of all creation is people and I couldn’t think of a better way to share some BCA delight with you than with some pictures. Enjoy this glimpse of BCA life. Even so, there’s so much more than what’s been captured here...

“Dear BCA,” she exclaimed, “you are very lovely and I am glad to be alive in you.”
